The social and political aspects of affairs in the British metropolis are clearly reflected in our special cable telegram, published on unother page. The transfer of Mr. Lowell, it appears, affords unmixed satisfaction to both Englishmen and Americans.

"You're another," says the Democratic Governor of Mississippi to the Republican Governor of Manne. This is a courtesy worthy of the highest official circles in the Carolinas, where the transition period between drinks is the object of philosophical revery.

The Fusionist plot in Maine is dragging again. The mock Legislature has submitted various appeals to the Supreme Court, to Congress and to the people of the State, and one of their leaders has reminded his associates that they must hold the fort-which means the fence about the State House-until the decision of the Bench shall be received. The Governor of the State, meanwhile, shows signs of impatience and righteons indignation. Our London correspondent informs us that the Queen and her Prime Minister have a strong bond of sympathy. They have received threatening letters and have been compelled to fall back upon a dozen extra constables for protection. The assumption that Lord Beaconsfield is proof against assassination because he began life as a clever romance-writer and has only a fresh patent of nobility, is not well grounded. If the Czar is attacked in St. Petersburg, why should not Lord Beaconstield have a prickly scare in London? Has he not been for two years or more the veritable Brit-

When the accumulation of filth becomes unbearable, the only remedy we can think of is to remove the Superintendent of the Street-Cleaning Bureau, and appoint a new one, who proceeds to east some of the dirt into the river, and then rests from his labors.

We shall never effect a reform until we are ready to begin at the right end. That is to pictures illustrating the return of the gay say, the first step toward cleaning the streets must be to find a way of getting rid of the sweepings. Two years ago there was a solemn conference of municipal officials over this subject, and after much discussion and consideration of statistics they reached the conclusion that no improvement was possible until somebody should tell them where to put the dirt. The subject might be referred to a legislative committee, but that device has been tried before. We are inclined to believe that a volunteer commission assembled on the invitation of the Mayor-a few practical public-spirited citizens, the Police Commissioners, the Board of Health, and perhaps the Controller-ought to be able, after a careful inquiry into the conditions of the problem and a frank interchange of views, to find the long-sought solution.
